Keeping with its commitment of encouraging new works, Lubov, New York is presenting the first solo exhibition of Chicago-based artist Boris Ostrerov till January 8, 2017.

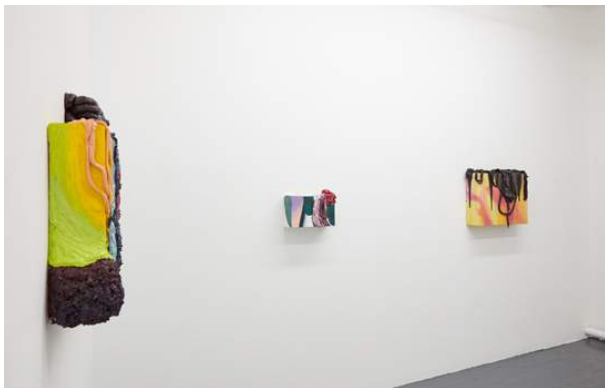

Ostrerov uses copious amounts of oil paint applied by squeezing it through cake-decorating bags. The pieces in the exhibition simultaneously function as sculptural objects and paintings, investigating the physical and illusionistic potential of painting. Ostrerov's work mirrors our culture's obsession with indulgence, accumulation and pleasure, and unapologetically celebrates the possibilities that emerge from it. Ostrerov's work was included in the New American Paintings show at the Elmhurst Art Museum in 2016.

The exhibition is on view at Lubov, 373 Broadway, #207 New York, NY 10013. For details, visit: <http://www.lubov.nyc/>
